

Ralph Hippe, PhD

Expert in VET and Skills at CEDEFOP

Ralph Hippe, PhD, is an expert in the field of VET and skills at CEDEFOP (European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training). This EU agency supports the development of European policies for vocational education and training and contributes to their implementation. Hippe holds degrees in Business Administration and Management from the Ecole de Management Strasbourg (France) and the University of Tübingen (Germany).

Additionally, he earned a doctorate in Economics from the University of Strasbourg and the University of Tübingen (summa cum laude). Following his PhD, he worked as a postdoctoral researcher at the London School of Economics (LSE). He also served as a consultant in a World Bank project and as a visiting researcher at IDDRI/Sciences Po Paris.

He joined the Joint Research Centre of the European Commission and worked as a research fellow in Ispra (Italy) and Seville (Spain). One of his responsibilities included leading the SELFIE tool for vocational education and work-based learning, which supports schools and businesses in the digital age.
